

The British Psychosocial Oncology Society (BPOS) is a multidisciplinary organisation for the advancement of education, research, and practice-based care in psychosocial oncology

BPOS is a registered charity run by an elected multidisciplinary executive committee that aims to:

- Provide a forum for professionals to meet, present research, and to discuss new ideas and developments
- Encourage research, education and higher standards of training in psychosocial oncology
- Improve the quality of care of people with cancer
- Promote knowledge and implementation of the principles of psychosocial oncology amongst those working with people with cancer and their families

JOIN US!!

We welcome anyone with an interest in psychosocial oncology to become a member of BPOS and/or stand for nomination on the executive committee. As vacancies on the BPOS executive committee arise they are advertised on our website (www.bpos.org).

BPOS members receive regular society newsletters & eBulletins, discounted rates to society events, discounted subscription to Psycho-Oncology (our society affiliated journal), access to members-only section of website, etc.

Annual BPOS membership costs £30 for full membership and £25 for students
